Look at me! This is my new life as a single man. It would have been 10 years in July. Can you believe it? 10 years and I have no regrets. Remember this for the rest of your life, the 4 R's. Remorse, Repair, Responsibility, Repeat. I had to feel the remorse of not having her in my life, I had to dig deep inside to repair myself, I then had to take responsibility for my part in the break up, and last I have to make sure I never repeat the mistakes I made ever again. No body's perfect. We learn till we die. To have and loose, and rebuild is part of life. I've learned it's in my blood to never give up. To be single in what I do is pretty fucking dangerous! Do I know the chick in the picture? No I don't. Does this means she likes me? No it doesn't. It's really nothing. It's a show. It's part of the energy in this Industry. We do what we do to Entertain. The key to this is to leave it there. Never bring your work home. There's always gonna be some sweet outsider who likes you and wants to change you, but 9 times out of 10 it doesn't work. Who you are and where your going in life is already set in stone. Don't change yourself for no one. If the person interested in you can't except you for who you are and what you do, they don't deserve you. Never let anyone hold you back. There's a lot of selfish and insecure people out there now a days. Even though your reading this and I probably don't know you, I wish you the best. Everybody's situation is different, but you can learn something from it.

See ya, Goldie DeWitt
